

The Hold Steady Tour

Jan 17, 2006

Story by: Jesseka Kadylak

Sing talkers (or talk singers) the Hold Steady will leave the wilds of Brooklyn, NY for a southern tour. The band will hit up all our favorite red states after beginning their tour in Washington DC on Feb 1. Supporting acts include Frenchkiss Records' the Plastic Constellations and Midwestern duo Swearing At Motorists, whose new album Last Night Becomes This Morning will be released midtour February 7. Speaking of new albums, the Hold Steady have been writing songs for their followup to Separation Sunday, which they expect out sometime this year. According to the band's site, the new songs are spilling out and they will be playing many of them on the upcoming tour. After hanging in the south for a few weeks, the same lineup will head even further south for the Hold Steady's first Australian tour.
